What Are Residential Treatment Services For Pregnant And Parenting Women (PPW)?

Pregnant and parenting women are given priority access to DBHR-funded treatment services. Residential chemical dependency treatment is available for women and their children under the age of six for up to six months. Length of stay is variable, and is determined by the woman's needs using American Society of Addiction Medicine (ASAM) patient placement criteria. Structured clinical services are provided in a planned regimen of patient care in a 24-hour, live-in setting. PPW residential treatment offers an enhanced curriculum for high-risk women. Services may include a focus on domestic violence, childhood sexual abuse, mental health issues, employment skills and education, linkages to pre-and postnatal medical care, legal advocacy, and safe affordable housing.

Therapeutic childcare is offered in residential treatment settings when one or more children accompany their mother to treatment. These services are offered for the health and welfare of children at risk of abuse, neglect, and eventual substance abuse. Services include: developmental assessments using recognized, standardized instruments; play therapy; behavioral modification; individual counseling; self-esteem-building activities; and family intervention to modify parenting behavior and the child's environment to eliminate or prevent dysfunctional behavior.

What Population Are Served And/Or Who Is Eligible For These Services?

Services are available to high-risk substance-abusing pregnant and parenting women and their young children at or below 220% of the federal poverty level or Medicaid eligible, who abuse alcohol and/or drugs during pregnancy and meet the American Society of Addiction Medicine (ASAM) criteria for chemical dependency.

How Many People Are Served Each Biennium?

An estimated 1,300 women and their families were served in the 2007-09 Biennium. During fiscal year 2009 (7/1/08 to 6/30/09), 705 unduplicated patients were admitted for PPW residential treatment services.

What Is The Biennial Funding Amount and Source(s)?

For the 2009-11 Biennium, over $17.3 million is budgeted for PPW Residential treatment ($14 m) and Therapeutic Childcare ($3.3 m). These funds are a combination of Medicaid and state dollars.

What Would Be The Impact If These Services Were No Longer Available?

There would no longer be treatment facilities specifically designed for women and their children. Children would no longer be able to go to the treatment facility to live with their mother, therefore decreasing bonding opportunities.

What Agencies Collaborate With DBHR To Deliver These Services?

PPW residential treatment providers work closely with a network of community providers to ensure support services are available, accessible, and meet the needs of women and their families. Many agencies act as referral sources and notify providers of eligible women who need treatment. PPW residential treatment providers have established working relationships with mental health provider networks to respond to the prevalence of co-occurring disorders among high-risk substance-abusing women.
